HAUNTED BELL OF THE ENGINE It Rang, Although the Fireman Did Not Pull the Rope.

"Did you ever ride let the engineer's cab on an engine?" asked a talkative traveler of his silent vis-a-vis, quotes the Chicago Times-Herald. "Once," replied the silent man, briefly.

"Exhibarating, isn't it? I ride there often when taking a long trip and get a new view of things—especially at night. How did it impress you?"

of the American Live Stock Feeders' and case for the road, and a large fee for myself Breeders' association, delegates to the live stock convention at Denver were appointed "The fireman had no case?" "No, not from a legal point of view; from a sentimental one it might have been different. But big railroads are not run on senti-mental lines. The young man had a wife and two children. The widow brought her little ones to plead their father's case, but I proved that the firemen lost his life through his own carelessness. He went into the ditch with his engine, when, if he had jumped, as the engineer did, he would have been un-or?"

"I'm not ringing the bell," the man said, and he looked out of the cab window and said that the bell was not ringing at all.
"Well, it gave us a shock. It was like a bell tolling-so loud and solemn. But it wen not the bell of our cogine, and it stopped as impress you?"

"As I said, I never rode that way but once, it impressed me in a remarkable way, which I thought at the time was supernatural. But my experience with things supernatural is that if you follow them up closely you will always find a natural explanation.

As for that trip in the cab, I have never settled the thing in my own mind. Besides it was a very trivial incident. Here it is, but I warn you there is nothing to it. I got in the cab with the engineer at one of the stations for a definite purpose. I am a corporation lawyer, and I had just settled a case for this same railroad in which a large sum of money was pending as damages in the instance of the death of a young man employed as fireman on the road. I won the case for the road, and a large fee for myself.
